

What have we achieved in in this project?

Culturally?

We learned about how family culture in the different countries. By living at the homes we learned about food culture. We learned about the society in the countries and how the cities works.

Socially?

We learned about the Icelandic school and the other way around. We learned to cooperate and work together, even though we come from different countries.

Geographically?

Iceland is so much bigger but the population is smaller. There is a lot of mountains and hills, where in Denmark it's really flat. Denmark have forests and Iceland have glaciers. The landscape in the two countries is very different.

Communicational?

We were communicating through a third language. We have some of the same words and we learned how the two languages is so similar.

Better language skills?

We been practicing English and getting better at talking it. We learned a few Icelandic words and the Icelandic students got better at danish.

Connected to the topic of the project?

The UN goals?

We are more aware of the problem with the climate changes and much damage it does. We saw one of the places that were affected by it, and in which ways. We saw how fast the glaciers were melting and learned about the consequences.

Something else?

Meeting new people and getting to know each other.

What can you use the knowledge you gained in this project in the future?

Being more aware of the damage we do to the earth through over-consumption etc. How to get to know new people across the borders.

A short summary from each group?

It has been an educational project. We gained new experiences, like how the school is. And how the two countries is so different but so similar at the same time.
